FINAL REFLECTION - Arantza

This project allowed us to experience the value of teamwork. Each member contributed their skills and perspectives, helping us build a more complete product. Even though we had some initial challenges in coordinating tasks and aligning the different parts of development, we learned to organize ourselves better to be able to make the team work to the fullest.

Nevertheless, we did have our other challenges to surpass. Integration between the frontend and backend was a constant struggle, especially ensuring that the interface consumed the APIs correctly. We also miscalculated the time needed for some activities, leading to being very pressured at certain points. We, nevertheless, were able to successfully surpass all the challenges and deliver a pretty nice and fully functional website.

Finally, we improved our technical skills and gained experience in project management. We also developed a pretty good relationship as a team. This experience prepared us better for future challenges, giving us the skills and confidence to handle more complex projects.