FINAL REFLECTION:

I thoroughly enjoyed the class and found it incredibly engaging and insightful. It was a fantastic experience where I had the opportunity to learn a wide range of new concepts and skills. However, as much as I appreciated the learning process, I've realized that I might want to take a step back from programming for a while. Specifically, working with JavaScript wasn't something I particularly enjoyed. On the other hand, I discovered a newfound interest in interface design, which resonated with me much more. In the end, I think I'm more drawn to the creative aspects of design than to the technicalities of programming, and I'm excited to explore that path further.
